GERMANY SIGNS

Germany signs; peace comes at last!

After four years of ineffectual effort to heap kultur on the unwilling world and eight months of threats and entreaties at the Peace Conference, the supermen of Germany have decided to cast their "honor" to the winds and meet the demands of the Allies.

It was only when the Big Four had turned a deaf ear to their arguments, when threats of bolshevism and anarchy had failed, when Foch's army was again ready to advance and only two hours of grace remained that Germany's representative swept over the Allies' acts of violence and agreed to affix the German signature to the treaty. Thus ends the great war, which, even in her last protest, Germany claims was not her child.

And now comes peace to the weary at last. The world can turn again to thoughts of rest and to normal ideas of friendship and trade.

The statement of the National Association of Real Estate Boards that there is a shortage of one million homes in the United States does not seem to be decreasing the number of June weddings.

OUR TROOPS IN SIBERIA

One officer and three men of the American Expeditionary Forces in Siberia were killed in an engagement the other day. Two were wounded.

The question now arises in the minds of American people whether or not the handful of soldiers stationed in Siberia to guard railroads and tunnels will be returned home when the peace treaty is signed. Another question that has perplexed the public is what noticeable good can 2,000 soldiers do in a country that is overrun by so many conflicting forces. Factions spring up over night and each one runs its course. The stronger survive.

Those recently discharged from the service, and especially those who were with the Army of Occupation in Germany the first few months can easily understand the state of mind of our soldiers in Siberia.

The administration at Washington has been sharply criticized and even ridiculed by articles in magazines and newspapers throughout the country. Unless there is a reason other than that of protection, a policy of diplomacy it might be called, then the War Department should be forced by popular opinion to withdraw our troops from Siberia.

The Government has recommended buttermilk as a healthful substitute for alcoholic beverages and named July 1 Buttermilk Day. Let's all drink one to the Government; there's no war tax on buttermilk.

WHY FRET?

If you notice yourself becoming nervous and fretful, don't take it out on your nearest neighbor. Remember the breezes that blow cool over the golf links; the waters that lave soothingly the banks of the Hinkson; the Grindstone and the Perche; gurgling springs like Tinspout; orchards that are ripening; daisies that nod in every meadow; and birds that trill contentment. Drop everything, go forth and commune a while with some of nature's children. Give yourself a vacation, if only for an hour.

It is true that these are warm days, but let us hold our patience and be pleasant to the persons we meet. Let's not be worried by the fact that our efficiency is cut down by the high temperature. Why not ease up a bit and live with the weather instead of fretting to maintain the high mark of our winter energy? The work we do may not be the most important thing in the world after all; so if we produce a little less, whether we lay a thousand brick or only 800 on a hot day will probably matter little in the great scheme of things.

Stevenson said, "Suppose Shakespeare had been knocked on the head some dark night in Sir Thomas Lucy's preserves, the world would have wagged on for better or worse, the pitcher gone to the well, the scythe to the corn, and the student to his book; and no one been any the wiser of the loss."

If the world could have done without Shakespeare, it probably will not become seriously anaemic if the output of our hands or brain is slightly lessened during the hot summer season.

MY, BUT IT'S HOT!

Somebody stopped in the shade, mopped his dripping forehead and neck, and with a mock feeling in his voice exclaimed, "My but it's hot!"

Just then a dainty thing in a few frills breezed by.

Somebody again braved the sun, and he hit out at a rapid pace, muttering time, "My, but it's hot!"

To every Somebody: why not wear "just a few frills?"

THE OPEN COLUMN

Upholds Pedestrians' Rights.

Editor the Missouriian: An article in your paper of Thursday on the automobile and the pedestrian, raises a question of interest to every citizen. But when you say, "In many cases the driver is entirely within his rights. He has the right-of-way at crossings," you are wrong. For this is where the rights of the pedestrian are superior; at all other places the driver comes first.

This principle is strictly enforced in Europe, especially in France, a country where, unlike our own, they do not have laws which they fail to enforce. Indeed, even before the days of the auto, it used to be an American joke that if a man was run over on the street it was the man and not the driver who was arrested and fined. This was true only where the accident occurred at a place other than at a crossing. For in a city, town or village where the streets have sidewalks for pedestrians, no one had a right to walk on or pass over the street except at the legal crossings. And there, the driver must see to it that he did not strike a person engaged in crossing the street, even though he had to come to practically a stop at these places.

The American courts have not been so strict on this point as the European ones, but they generally recognize the principle.

The reliance that womenkind has learned to put in crackers is being well illustrated at the tea being given for returning soldiers and sailors.

Every woman in the room has in her pantry a generous supply of the National Biscuit Company's always useful and universally accepted.

Nettie, a comely young woman, yeoman of the Navy, still in uniform, found herself unexpectedly entertaining a company at her uptown home the other night.

Including several of the most distinguished of the business world.

She had a very successful business after a shopping trip, or the child home from a hard day at school, nothing is more sustaining than N.B.C. Graham Crackers. Their nut-like flavor is more enticing, even, than the old fashioned kind.
